

Page Six

Magazine

SEPTEMBER 14, 2008

EAT MY DUST

NYC's most powerful spots battle for supremacy

YOU BOOZE, YOU LOSE

Why going on the wagon is the new secret to success

MILLION-DOLLAR PLAYGROUNDS

Luxury playgrounds vying for the city's richest kids

WONDER BEARD

Why hipsters are sporting major facial hair this fall

LAKEVIEW TERRACE

KEEP WASHING UP

ON BEAUTY, BRAINS AND BREAKUPS

Six life

Kids

WHAT'S HOT FOR TOTS

The (Other) Soho House

Citibabes

477 Broadway, 3rd Fl.,
(between Broome and Grand Sts.); 212-334-5440

Proof that city chic knows no bounds, this mommy-and-me club has a state-of-the-art spa, salon and gym (complete with personal trainers and a relaxation room). The annual fee is steep, but membership means you could be hanging out next to Gwyneth Paltrow or Naomi Watts. Parents can join their kids in the interactive play space designed to look like a lush outdoor park or have a massage while their little ones brush up on their French. "We wanted to create a family community with exciting activities for children, parents and caregivers," says co-founder Tracey Frost Rensky.

Cost: $2,100 annual fee, which gives you unlimited access to the gym and playground, two complimentary personal training sessions, a manicure, a pedicure and a 30-minute massage.

THE BEST FALL BAGS
Five hot trends at every price